QUANTREL RAIDERS

Gov. Hoch Don't Want Them
Returned For Trial Under Indictment.

Associated Press.

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 31—Governor Hoch said today he did not believe in the project of returning Quantrel raiders to Douglas county for trial under grand jury indictments found against them after the raid on Lawrence.

"I refuse to say what I would do if the question of issuing requisitions was put to me," he said, "because I do not believe such a thing would be asked. I have no idea what Folk would do under the circumstances."

The Toilers in Our Factories.

No workmen in the world can do research or give the same intelligence that our American workmen and women can give of that is now bearing the world in importance; all due to the brain and muscle of our Yankee men and women.

Unfortunately, where there is disease, dirt and dust and little sunlight there also can be found the germs of disease. Nature's great disinfectant is sunlight. It is in the factory, the workshop, the office, that men and women suffer from diseases which affect the dust and the bad air. Such diseases become rampant into the blood in some ways, either through the lungs or stomach.

I would have been a little better with the sleep I had, I suppose, but if it hadn't been the way I was looked after, I don't think I would have been much better than they were."

What Becomes of the Bibles?

The announcement of Dr. James Morris, secretary of the Pennsylvania Bible Society, that his organization alone distributed 10,000,000 Bibles last year, while 5,000,000 were sold by the trade, again calls attention to the immense circulation of the book. Where all the Bibles issued go to is a wonder even among the agencies that are concerned in the work. Distributions are supposed to cover, as far as possible, places and persons not yet reached, but it would appear that there are no longer any such persons and places left. Even supposing there were Bibles in the knapsacks of some or even all of the slaughtered thousands on the field or buried with their clothes on at Fort Arthur and Mukden, that would be but a drop in the ocean of production. The proportion of Bibles to be found on second-hand book stalls is not greater than of other books, nor are they probably stored away more than other books are. Persons who have investigated this question say it is one of the unexplained mysteries.—Philadelphia Press.

Because the stomach is diseased, there is a diminution of the red corpuscles of the blood. This is why one is sluggish, languid, nervous and irritable. Sensitive stomach grows slow at the exciting cold fires, but they will get all the heat again in the time required by using the "Dermolite".

The "Dermolite" is absolutely a non-alcohol and non-acidic medicine.

There is nothing like "Dermolite" good.

CARING FOR THE STRANGER

People Were Pretty Nice and Obliging to the Man from the West.

"I find people pretty nice and obliging in this town," said a Chicago visitor, who was staying at one of the uptown hotels, relates the New York Sun. "Maybe I'm a pretty lucky person, but I've had one experience here that tickled me to death."

"I got here a couple of nights ago with a couple of friends. We had several idle hours on our hands, so we started out to see some of the town."

"In the course of that trip we met a number of congenial friends. They were all glad to see us and they felt that it was up to them to be hosts. And they were, in the approved style."

"About daylight the next morning I remembered an engagement I was due to keep a few hours later. I reminded my Chicago friends that they were in the same fix, remarking that I was going to get a nap in the nearest hotel. They gave me the laugh."

"Nothing doing," said one of them. "We're going to stay up until it is all over. You're foolish to go to bed. You'll never be able to get up for a good 12 hours."

"All the same, I picked out the nearest hotel and got a room. I gave the bellboy a juicy tip and told him that I wanted to be called at 11 o'clock—just four hours later. The boy looked me over and said:

"Boss, you ought to get your clothes pressed. You'll feel much better when you get dressed."

"I took his advice and the clothes were ready for me when I was called promptly at 11 o'clock. I got into them, and after I had looked myself over I felt that with a shave accompaniment I might do pretty well."

"Boss, you ought to get your clothes pressed. You'll feel much better when you get dressed."

"So I hustled downstairs to the hotel barbershop. I walked in and said, falling into a chair:

"I want a shave quick."

"You look pretty tough," was the reply.

"Then I seated right out at the barber. He was a nice spruce looking German boy, strong and athletic, the kind you would be apt to see around a turnstile."

"What you want first," he continued with a genial smile. "Is a shampoo. Sit up."

"He was so pleasant that I didn't kick. It took him a short five minutes to give me the shampoo."

"Now," he said, "just take a rest there, and I'll shave your face in a second."

"I slid into the chair and he went on:

"By the way, you'd better get a shave. Your shoes aren't cleaned much, but when a fellow isn't feeling good there's nothing like having a nice bright shine on his shoes. Every time you look at them you feel so much better."

"I made no objection and in a jiffy he had a toothpick at my shoes. The shave over and my shoes shined he ran his hands over my face.

"A good massage is what you want," he said.

"His voice was soft and pleasant and at no time did I get the impression that I was being worked or swindled."

"Soon he had the thing that is worked by electricity ironing out the wrinkles in my face. Then he got another machine, also run by electricity. That was very soothing to the face; it was great."

"I don't know whether it was the treatment or the way it was done, but I know that I could feel myself coming to life every minute. Finally, he went over my face with his hands smooth and gentle."

"I know that you had something pretty particular on, or you wouldn't have got out of bed the way you were. You needed a lot more sleep."

"That barber was a pretty nice chap. I was a spruce and chipper looking boy when I kept that engagement. My two friends were down and out. They had stayed up and were in pretty bad shape."

"I would have been a little better with the sleep I had, I suppose, but if it hadn't been the way I was looked after, I don't think I would have been much better than they were."

FOUND DEAD IN HER ROOM

Associated Press.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 2—The dead body of Miss Marie DeAmato was found in her apartments today. She lived alone for years.

She had asserted that her real name was Countess Marie Mosoli, formerly of Marseilles, France, and having eloped with an artisan she was divorced by her family and was later deserted by her family. She apparently died a natural death.
